ACTIVITIES OF THE WORLD COMMITTEE ON TOURISM ETHICS

Note by the Secretary-General

In this document, the Secretary-General presents to the General Assembly the Report of the World Committee on Tourism Ethics on the activities it has carried out in 2008-2009. The findings of the 2008 Survey on the Implementation of the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism are annexed to this document.

ACTIVITIES OF THE WORLD COMMITTEE ON TOURISM ETHICS

I. World Committee on Tourism Ethics

1. Following the endorsement by the last General Assembly of the new composition of the World Committee on Tourism Ethics for the period 2007-2011 (A/RES/532(XVII)), the Committee held its sixth meeting (the first under its new configuration) at the UNWTO Headquarters in Madrid on 13-14 March 2008.

2. On that occasion, the newly appointed Members unanimously elected Mr Dawid de Villiers, the candidate proposed by the Secretary-General for the position, as Chairman of the Committee for a four-year term ending with the General Assembly of 2011.

3. In that same above-mentioned resolution of 2007 and for the sake of continuity, the General Assembly had further agreed with the Secretary-General on the convenience of staggering, in the future, the renewal of the Committee. For this reason, it had entrusted the Committee "with the formulation of an appropriate procedure for the two-phased renewal of its seats and the recommendation on the members to be replaced in 2011, for approval at the eighteenth session of the Assembly".

4. The issue of the staggering has therefore been discussed by the new Committee at its three subsequent meetings held in Madrid (March 2008), Rome (November 2008) and San José, Costa Rica (June 2009). As a result of these debates, the Committee would recommend for adoption by the General Assembly in 2009 the following amendment to resolution A/RES/438(XIV), as amended by resolution A/RES/469 (XV):

"The members of the Committee and their alternates are re-elected by half every two years. During the session of the General Assembly in 2011, a total of eleven of the current members of the Committee will have their mandate extended for two more years; while the other eleven members or alternates will be elected for a full mandate of four years".

5. The Committee also revised its Rules of Procedures and adopted a number of amendments related to the inclusion of provisions clearly stipulating that the members were serving on the Committee on a personal capacity and specifying the procedure of their replacement in case of resignation. An additional modification referred to the appointment of a vice-chairperson who is elected for two years by the Committee among its full members. After a ballot vote which took place in San José, Costa Rica, during the eighth meeting of the Committee (18-19 June 2009), Ms Christel DeHaan, Member of the Committee appointed by the Affiliate Members to represent the category of "Employers", was elected as the Committee's new Vice-Chair. The amended text of the Rules of Procedures as adopted by the Committee at its eighth meeting in June 2009, is included in this document as Annex 1.

II. Permanent Secretariat of the Committee

6. The Permanent Secretariat of the World Committee on Tourism Ethics was inaugurated in Rome, Italy, on 14 November 2008 following the agreement reached in March 2008 by means of an Exchange of Letters between the Deputy Prime Minister of the Republic of Italy and the Secretary-General of the UNWTO.

7. It is recalled that following the offer made by Italy, the General Assembly had already given its agreement in principle in 2003 (A/RES/469(XV)), confirmed in 2005 (A/RES/506(XVI)), for the Permanent Secretariat to be hosted in this country.

8. Pursuant to the terms of the agreement, the main role of the Permanent Secretariat is to provide technical and expert support to the World Committee on Tourism Ethics, in particular, for the purpose of promoting and disseminating the UNWTO Global Code of Ethics for Tourism. Its core functions are threefold: (a) Promotion and dissemination of the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism, (b) Research and data collection on ethical questions and aspects associated to the sustainability of tourism development and the responsibility and accountability of its practitioners, and (c) Organization, in Italy, of meetings of the World Committee on Tourism Ethics and of international events related to the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism. These functions are performed by the Secretariat under the guidance of the Chairman of the Committee and in close cooperation with the Secretariat of the UNWTO.

9. The first activity of the Permanent Secretariat has been the successful hosting of the seventh meeting of the Committee on 14 and 15 November 2008 at its new premises located at the Italian the Department of Tourism Development and Competitiveness in Rome.

III. Activities of the Committee during the period 2008-2009

A. Programme of Work

10. The Committee has established its programme of work for the period 2008-2009 which is focused following four objectives:

- i. Strengthen the KNOWLEDGE and UNDERSTANDING of the Code of Ethics;
- ii. Improve the IMPLEMENTATION of the Code of Ethics by both governments and the tourism industry;
- iii. Provide tourism stakeholders with a CONSULTATION and CONCILIATION mechanism (external process);
- iv. Develop a “corpus” of CLARIFICATIONS on specific ethical issues related to tourism (internal process).

Knowledge of the Code

10. The strengthening of knowledge and understanding of the Code of Ethics needs to be achieved through an increased promotion of the Code and a targeted communications strategy on the nature and the significance of the Code. The Committee has therefore entrusted its Permanent Secretariat in Rome with the preparation of a global promotional strategy and campaign for the Code.

11. At its last meeting held in Costa Rica (June 2009), the Committee approved a new international logo for the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism to be used also to identify the corresponding Committee. The design of the logo was created by an international communications agency in Costa Rica and was proposed to the Committee by the Costa Rican Tourism Institute (ICT). The two versions of the logo are featured at the side. The logo will be a central part of the Code promotional strategy that is being developed in Rome.

12. As complementary actions to strengthen the knowledge of the Code, the Committee has met in Madrid (March 2008) with the UNWTO Regional Representatives to seek their assistance to improve the understanding and implementation of the Code at regional level. The Committee also discussed with the Executive Secretary of the UNWTO Education and Science Council on best ways to partner with universities and education institutions for integration of the Code into curricula and further recommended on that occasion that the implementation of the Code of Ethics should become one of the requirements within the TedQual certification scheme for educational institutions within the Education and Science Council. With regard to the latter, the Committee has been informed that within the context of the revision process of the TedQual Certification System initiated at the end of 2008, the UNWTO Themis Foundation is taking into consideration the criterion of compliance with the principles and provisions of the Code.

Implementation of the Code

13. The Committee usually monitors the implementation of the Code of Ethics mainly by means of surveys. As a follow-up to the previous Implementation Survey carried out in 2004-2005 -whose findings were reported in 2005 to the General Assembly in 2005 as well as to the United Nations General Assembly (UN document A/60/167)-, a new survey was launched among Full, Associate and Affiliate Members between September 2008 and May 2009. A summary of the preliminary findings of this last survey (including a list of respondents) is included in this document as Annex 2.

14. Regrettably, the response rate of the 2008-2009 survey (17 percent for the Full Members) was extremely low compared to the 62 percent participation that was recorded for the previous survey. These results are not considered representative enough to allow the Committee to assess the real impact of the Code and its overall degree of adherence and practical application at all stages.

15. In order to comply with United Nations General Assembly resolution A/RES/60/190 of 17 February 2006 which requests the Secretary-General to report to its sixty-fifth session in 2010 on the developments related to Global Code of Ethics, the Committee would ask the General Assembly to call upon all UNWTO member States, companies and educational institutions to provide the Secretariat with the necessary information to complete the UNWTO report to be finalised during the second quarter of 2010.

Conciliation Mechanism

16. The Committee wishes to remind UNWTO Members of the conciliation mechanism that is available for the settlement of disputes between tourism stakeholders. Cases can be submitted to the Committee jointly by two or more external parties involved in the dispute.

17. The Committee further offers tourism stakeholders an avenue for consulting on any concrete ethical issue related to tourism or to the implementation of the Code. These queries can be submitted by individual external parties, on the condition that they are not associated to any dispute related to the matter of consultation.

Corpus of clarifications

18. The Committee is currently working on a "Corpus of clarifications", through which it will issue its views on a series of timely topics of ethical or moral nature which are of general interest to the tourism community. These clarifications will be made widely known to the tourism stakeholders for future guidance.

B. Ethical issues addressed by the Committee

19. During the first half of his mandate (2008-2009), the Committee addressed a series of concrete issues with a clear ethical component, all of which linked, directly or indirectly, to the tourism sector. Among these topics, the most important ones were as follows: (a) the ethical implications of the financial and the economic downturn on the tourism industry - particularly the ethical challenges posed by job losses; the decline in the quality of products and services and the impact of the crisis particularly with regards to small operators, tour guides, local service providers and communities; (b) the obstacles to travel such as restrictions, particularly with regards to people with disabilities and those affected by HIV; (c) the delays in the issuance of visas, costs and complications which are slowly impinging on the rights of people to travel; (d) the contribution of the tourism industry to the protection of children against exploitation; (e) the importance of creating awareness among young professionals, through educational institutions, about the ethical principles involved in tourism, etc.

20. A new text and format for the leaflet "The Responsible Tourist and Traveller" containing practical tips for the travelling public, is currently being prepared by the Committee.

21. The ninth meeting of the Committee is scheduled to take place in Luxor, Egypt, in April 2010 following the kind invitation it received from the Egyptian Minister of Tourism.

ANNEX 2

2008/2009 SURVEY ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE GLOBAL CODE OF ETHICS FOR TOURISM

I. OBJECTIVE OF THE SURVEY

1. The survey was conducted for the purpose of updating the inventory of actions and measures taken by both public and the private sectors since the adoption of the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism in 1999.

II. THE PROCEDURE

2. The survey questionnaires were sent to different constituencies of the UNWTO Membership between September 2008 and February 2009. The questions were adapted to suit three categories of UNWTO Members, as follows: (A) Full and Associate Members, (B) Members of the Business Council and (C) Members of the Education and Science Council and other affiliated educational institutions.

III. RESPONSE RATE (as of 1 July 2009)

A. Full and Associate Members: Replies were received from 27 countries and territories out of 154 Full and 7 Associate Members, representing a response rate of 16.8 percent.

B. Members of the Business Council: Out of the 206 Members of the Business Council, only 15 companies have responded, representing 7.3 percent of this constituency.

C. Members of the Education and Science Council and other affiliated educational institutions: Overall, the survey questionnaire was sent to 107 educational institutions of which 19 institutions have replied, corresponding to a response rate of 17.7 percent.

IV. SUMMARY OF THE PRELIMINARY FINDINGS

A. UNWTO Full and Associate Members

3. The questionnaire sent to the National Tourism Administrations (NTAs) covered three major sections focusing on (a) the Dissemination of the Code, (b) the Implementation of the Code and (c) Best Practices.

4. From the 27 replies received from NTAs it appeared that the action most commonly taken by Member States to promote the Code had been the distribution of the Code to tourism stakeholders, which was followed by the translation of the Code into national languages. It should be noted that since the adoption of the Code in 1999 to the date, a total of 43 countries have reported to have translated this instrument into their national or local languages. Other promotional actions included, in descending order, national campaigns on specific aspects of the Code; the organization of meetings, workshops and round tables; training and capacity-building events for tourism personnel; press conferences; production of leaflets and guidelines; the distribution of the leaflet "The Responsible Tourist and Traveller" and, finally, the institutionalization of a monitoring system for the Code's implementation.

5. Main complementary actions reported were the organization of awareness raising seminars against sexual exploitation of children (in Brazil these were held in 69 cities and gathered overall as much as 32.000 attendees), the involvement of the tourism specialized media in the Code's dissemination, the adherence of key private sector stakeholders to the ECPAT Code of Conduct for the protection of children and campaigns in co-operation with UNICEF.

6. NTAs have further distributed the Code predominantly to tourism industry associations, tourism education/training institutions and regional or local tourism authorities, followed by tourism promotion boards, media, tourism workers' associations and NGOs. In certain countries the Code's principles were included in tourism development plans, as well as in multilateral action frameworks and forums aimed at fighting sexual exploitation of children.

7. More than a half of respondents expressed their formal acceptance of the Code, even at more than one official level. A significant number of countries (14) have approved or endorsed the document at institutional or governmental level or at the level of their respective tourism ministries and national administrations (12); Costa Rica, The Flemish Community of Belgium, Tanzania and Uruguay have adopted Parliamentary/Ministerial resolutions regarding the Code. Eleven countries reported that the text had been publicly presented by means of official statements at press conferences or similar public events.

8. Most of the responding States have indicated that they had either incorporated the principles of the Code into their legislative texts¹, have used them as a basis for establishing national laws and regulations or have embarked on preparing national or sectoral codes of ethics for tourism². The great majority of the NTAs (23) stated that their laws and regulations did include provisions specially related to tourism with respect to (a) sustainable development and (b) local community development and, in a lesser degree, these referred also to (c) improved understanding between cultures, (d) labor issues and (e) social issues.

9. Among sustainable development issues that have been incorporated in tourism legislation or regulations are the protection of natural environment and local culture (both 22 replies). In terms of local community development issues included in laws are the opening of local employment opportunities in tourism (19) and the investment in training and skills transfer (18).

10. In the field of the enhancement of understanding between cultures, the most noteworthy aspects included in laws and regulations are safety and protection of tourists (19), as well as entry, health and customs facilities (18). With regard to labour issues, the most commonly regulated topics were reported to be equal opportunities (18); whereas provisions related to social issues were associative tourism (18), as well as poverty alleviation, the improvement of quality of life and the protection of children (all 17).

B. UNWTO Business Council

11. The questionnaire intended for the Business Council questions which have been grouped in seven sections: (a) Awareness of the Code, (b) its Formal Acceptance, (c) its Format Suitability, (d) the Implementation of the Code, (e) Dissemination, (f) Corporate Social Responsibility Policies, and, finally, (g) Awareness of the UN Global Compact.

² Brasil, Costa Rica, Indonesia, Latvia, Nigeria and Senegal.

12. All 15 respondents in this category indicated to be aware of the existence of the UNWTO Global Code of Ethics for Tourism, and the same also suggested that they would agree to a formal acceptance of it. The majority of the surveyed confirmed that the document was suitable for their type of business, and that they had already undertaken some implementation actions. Among the most relevant actions were the incorporation of some of the Code's principles in CSR policies (9) and the preparation of sector-specific codes (8), followed by the inclusion and integration of the Code's provisions in their respective codes of conduct and industry/training programmes. One hotel group and two travel agencies also included relevant provisions of the Code in contractual instruments.

13. Most of the companies (12) have embarked on some form of dissemination activities to promote the Code; mainly by distributing it to tourism stakeholders, launching communication campaigns on specific aspects of the Code (e.g. prevention of sexual exploitation of children) or organizing training and capacity building for tourism personnel.

14. The majority of respondents (80 percent) have disseminated the Code both to their staff at headquarters and to owners/shareholders. To a lesser extent it was distributed further to industry associations/employers, suppliers and tourists/visitors/clients.

15. Almost all respondents (87 percent) have adopted CSR policies in tourism which included provisions regarding mostly social responsibility aspects, followed by responsibility for the environment, local economy (community development) and cultural understanding.

16. Most of the Members of the UNWTO Business Council which have responded to the Survey are familiar with the UN Global Compact and its 10 principles.

C. UNWTO Educational institutions

17. The Survey questionnaire has been disseminated to Members of the Education and Science Council and other TedQual certified centers, as well as to the rest of educational institutes affiliated to UNWTO. It consisted of the following sections: (a) Integration of Ethics in the Curriculum, (b) Knowledge and Integration of the Code of Ethics for Tourism in Curricula, (c) Dissemination of the Code and (d) Comments and Suggestions.

18. The majority of the 19 respondents reported to have one or more subjects related to CSR, total quality management, business ethics or to specific sectoral codes of ethics in their educational programme, the first two of these subjects being the most common. Most of the subjects are offered as a single course or as a part of another course. Other ways of integrating these subjects into the curriculum are through projects, seminars and training courses. As to the Code of Ethics, the great majority of respondents (15 institutions) had already integrated the Code into their curricula, usually as a part of a course. A few institutions discussed the Code within a single course on ethics, while outside reading, the organization of workshops, seminars, panels, and posting of the Code on the faculty or student bulletin boards have had minor importance. The institutions which had not yet integrated the Code expressed their intention to do so.

19. The general opinions expressed about the Code and the suggestions made for its promotion show that in general, the respondents had positive attitude about the Code, considering the text as a comprehensive framework, essential for the sound functioning of the tourism system. However, some also expressed concern about its applicability due to its general and broad content, as well as the insufficient mechanisms available for its implementation.

20. The respondents indicated that the major benefits of the Code and its integration in curricula are its significance for creating tourism policy, ensuring sustainability and ethical conduct, encouraging students to adopt best practices in tourism and providing guidelines for the development of tourism professionals. Nevertheless, a few institutions pointed out difficulties for the Code's integration such as the lack of students' interest, motivation, and experience, low relevance of the document and, finally, the present format which is not user-friendly.

21. Most of institutions willing to engage in the Code-related activities would like to introduce new courses, organize training programs for the workers in the industry regarding the Code, foster related research and publications, organize conferences/ seminars/ workshops to inform the tourism industry managers, local community, tourism information centres, media and tourists themselves. In addition, they would be eager to provide guidance to the local administration on the Code's promotion and implementation.

Member Country Example: The Republic of Indonesia

22. At the initiative of Prof. Gede I Ardika, Member of the World Committee on Tourism Ethics, Indonesia provided UNWTO with 31 questionnaires completed by 27 Indonesian universities and 4 government authorities with responsibilities in the field of education.

23. The great majority of institutions have incorporated the Code in their educational programs. Most comments on the applicability of the Code have been very positive, as universities stated that the Code played an important role in the education of future professionals and that it would be necessary to proceed with its further implementation. In addition, the respondents reiterated that the laws should be more strictly enforced by national authorities.

24. One government institution indicated that the Code was especially appreciated by foreign tourists. Conversely, some entities thought that the Code did not coincide with general business objectives, for that reason many universities and some government institutions stressed the difficulties for its implementation by the tourism industry.

25. A group of institutions would be interested in organizing training programs for tourism workers to educate them about the Code, as well as in promoting the GCET within local communities. Finally, the Ministry of Culture and Tourism suggested introducing an award winning system for those stakeholders committing to implement the Code, while another respondent proposed to gather representatives of all levels of tourism education in order to design a code of ethics in accordance with their own needs and interests.
